

AGENDA

Oleoline's 2023 Global Glycerine Conference marks the return of one of the unmissable event of your calendar for those interested in glycerine.

The now well-honed concept is to invite an expert of the different drivers of the glycerine market to discuss the developments specific to his field.

Oleoline then works to put these views together and attempt and present the audience with an overall supply and demand scenario for the glycerine market.

At this stage, the speakers who have agreed to join the conference allow us to draw up the backbone of the agenda as follows:

On the supply side

Loredana Bucur-Guesnon of REG – Chevron will look at the development of the diesel market, the prospect of biodiesel versus renewable diesel/HVO and the impact this will have on by-products such as glycerine.

Damian Tancredi from HBI Argentina will brief the audience on the developments of the animal fat markets in South America.

BS Bios, the largest biodiesel producer in Brazil, through the director of their European subsidiary, Ernesto Pinheiro Countino, have agreed to analyse the driver of the South American biodiesel markets.

Samuel Chevigny from HBI France will discuss the development of the oleochemicals market for a look at the consequences of the European antidumping duties on Indonesian fatty acids.

On the demand side

The audience will be treated to a full brief on the main geographic markets as:

Catherine Sieben of Oleon will analyze the European refined glycerine market.

Fred Wang of HBI China the Chinese glycerine market.

Deborah Baldwin from Vantage Group the North American market.

While European and US glycerine prices continue decreasing from high values, the Chinese market levels have been improving in the past few weeks. One of the key developments of the past months has been the formidable consumption of crude glycerine in biogas, which has helped producers keep byproduct inventories under control, especially in Europe. Lars William Schmidt of DLG will update us on the drivers of this key market.

TICKETS ARE AVAILABLE AT A COST OF 3 000 EUROS PER PERSON INCLUDING VAT.

THIS COVERS THE ACCESS FOR ONE DAY AND A HALF TO THE CONFERENCE,

ALL MEALS AND ONE HOTEL NIGHT.

The agenda of the conference is tentative and discussions are ongoing with other speakers on the additional topics (3 more speeches are expected) which will feature at this event.

Sour suggestions are welcome.
